As I write this article, Indians are celebrating Diwali Festival. This grand celebration features fireworks (in India), sharing of sweets, and expression of joy through music and dance. The business community celebrates the flowering of Lakshmi, the energy of abundance.

Diwali festival has a mythological significance. It marks the end of Narakasura's demonic rule during Dvapara yuga (previous major earth cycle). This story is very interesting and relevant to the upcoming earth changes.

Narakasura is the son of Vishnu (the embodiment of the multi-dimensional universe) and Bhudevi (the mother earth). When Narakasura was born, Vishnu reveals Narakasura's demonic nature. Bhudevi, out of motherly attachment, requests Vishnu not to kill her son. Vishnu agrees and gives a word that Narakasura can be destroyed only in the hands of his mother. Narakasura grows up, becomes powerful, and starts his demonic rule on the earth.

Eventually Narakasura's demonic activities reach the kingdom of Krishna. Krishna, being aware of Vishnu's word, doesn't take any action. Satyabhama, Krishna's wife, unable to bear the suffering of the women caused by Narakasura, picks up the bow and demands Krishna to fight Narakasura, vowing that she will support him in the war. Krishna gladly accepts and attacks Narakasura with his army. In the final stage, Narakasura overpowers Krishna, and Krishna faints. Satyabhama awakens her inner Durga, the intense feminine energy, picks up the bow and shoots an arrow that instantly destroys Narakasura. When Krishna wakes up, she asks Krishna for an explanation of this miracle. Krishna reveals that he is an embodiment of Vishnu and that Satyabhama is an embodiment of Bhudevi. Following Vishnu's word, Narakasura died in the hands of his own mother.

Life on earth goes through cycles. We are currently witnessing the transition of earth from darkness into light. Mother Earth, with the assistance of hundred thousand awakened beings who are radiating divine feminine, is intensifying her Durga energy to dissolve the forces of darkness. In the upcoming few years, be prepared to witness the dissolution of all demonic masculine structures which are based on duality, limitedness, control and fear. These include economic, political, education, religious and spiritual systems. After the dissolution of these structures, new structures based on divine feminine will emerge, transforming the earth into a golden planet. The new structures will be based on oneness, unlimitedness, creativity, sharing and joy. Lakshmi-Sarasvati phase will start after the Durga phase.

For those who continue to live with fear, stress and limited ideas, the next few years will be extremely difficult. For those who make a conscious choice to assist Mother Earth by dissolving their inner darkness and allowing their inner divine feminine to flower, the next few years will be colorful, joyful and magical.

The process of becoming an embodiment of divine feminine is described in the following article: "The Play of Multi-Dimensional Feminine and Masculine Energies." Here is the link: <http://www.sadhanaschoolofarts.com/PDF/Energies.pdf>.
